BASIC PARENT INFORMATION REGARDING CHILD SEXUAL ABUSE

1. What is Sexual Abuse? The sexual abuse of a child occurs whenever any person forces, tricks or threatens a child in order to have sexual contact with him or her. This may include behaviors such as viewing pornographic material, as well as actually touching, fondling, or penetration.
2. How can you determine that sexual abuse has taken place? First and foremost, if your child reveals to you that they have been sexually abused, believe them. Children seldom lie or make up stories about such a serious matter. Often, there is physical evidence, for example:
 - a. A discharge from the vaginal area or penis
 - b. Injury to the genitals or anus
 - c. Pain, itching or bleeding in the genital or anal area
 - d. Discomfort in walking or sitting
 - e. Discovery of sexually transmitted disease
3. What can you as a parent do to prevent sexual abuse? Talk to your child or children about the importance of not allowing anyone to touch them inappropriately. You must decide how detailed to be or how much detail to use depending on the child's age and ability to comprehend. Your child need not be made to fear or be suspicious of all adults. Simply tell your child/children if anyone touches them or does anything that makes them feel uncomfortable, they should immediately report it to you or another adult that they trust. Most importantly, teach your child that they can say no and that they never have to do anything that makes them feel uncomfortable.
4. If you discover that your child has been sexually abused:
 - a. Immediately contact the police or sheriff's department and the department of children's or social services.
 - b. Assure your child/children that you still love them, and that it was not their fault.
 - c. Let your child know that they will be protected from any further abuse.
 - d. Seek medical care at once. Internal injuries may have occurred. If deep penetration took place, sexually transmitted diseases are also possible.

I have read the information presented and have a basic understanding of child sexual abuse.
